The North Valley has seen too many crises lately.

First there was the Oroville spillway evacuation, then the devastating Camp Fire. As we surpassed the one-year anniversary of the Camp Fire and our region started to focus more on the future, another calamity hit.

The coronavirus pandemic affected the whole world, of course, but the problem was compounded here, with trauma upon trauma.

As always, though, we witnessed our compassionate community at its best. We opened the Coronavirus (COVID-19) Rapid Response Fund to raise money. Within three months, we had mobilized more than $1 million in grants back into the community.

We helped stock food banks, start food delivery programs and provide food, shelter and other resources to the most vulnerable members of our four-county service area.

We organized an effort to provide reusable face shields for all health care workers in Butte, Glenn, Tehama and Colusa counties. We purchased reusable masks so businesses could give masks to customers to keep people safe and restore confidence to shop locally.

We did all this while simultaneously staying laser-focused on Camp Fire recovery, with millions of dollars issued in grants, especially in the areas of housing, community development, and health and wellness. We managed this by keeping our Camp Fire program officers dedicated to their monumental task, while a separate team at NVCF concentrated on COVID-19 needs.

At the same time we were responding to these calamities affecting our area, we continued the important work that has always been the core of our businesses — developing and working with the hundreds of charitable funds held at NVCF. These funds started with a person’s idea to change the world for the better, and in 2020 we saw that the need for change focused on social good is more important than ever.

We feel fortunate to be part of that effort.

- Words of Appreciation
“I used to believe that prayer changes things, but now I know that prayer changes us, and we change things.”

When I first read these words from Mother Teresa, I fell to my knees and wept. In 20 words she’d managed to extract my faith in humanity. In 20 words she’d described the core belief NVCF was rebuilt on more than 15 years ago. It’s the belief that human beings are inherently good and that we can take care of one another, and this planet.

I have decades of evidence to prove this, but I suspect if you are reading this, you believe it too. Every day in a million ways human beings do selfless, generous things for people they love and total strangers alike. This was true before the Camp Fire ravaged our region. This was true before a pandemic took over our globe. This was true before George Floyd’s death at the hands of a police officer ripped open wounds that demand and deserve to be healed. It was true before all of that and it’s true now.

We are the solution. You. Me. Them. Us. We will heal us. This is humanity’s call to action and humanity will answer!

When I am asked how a little foundation with a handful of employees and board members turned into the leading philanthropic organization in the Camp Fire relief and recovery, I point to this truth. When I am asked how we mobilized to address the pressing needs of COVID-19, I point to this truth. When I am asked how we show up, day in and day out, to address injustice, and the pains and hurts in our world, I point to this truth.

We are the solution. You. Me. Them. Us. This is our call to action.

Every firefighter. Every nurse. Every civil servant. Every grocery store clerk. Every doctor. Every donor. Every mom. Every dad. Every child. Every one of us. We are the solutions to the problems we face.

The call is louder now. The dark is a little darker. The suffering is a little deeper. We need to dig in. We need to find more courage, more faith, more fuel for the journey. But, make no mistake, we will get through this. The dawn will come. So, I humbly ask you, pray to whatever Source guides you, but pray for us, all of us, because we must do this together. If we start on our knees and end arm in arm, we will heal us.

You have my love,

Alexa Benson-Valavanis
President and CEO
Part of the NVCF magic comes from the 19 wholehearted love warriors who compose the team. Thanks to Alexa and the amazing individuals she has attracted, together we work hard, play hard, laugh, cry, support, dream dreams and lift one another up.

This past year our leadership team went through a thoughtful process of choosing words to describe our culture and landed on three core values reflecting who we are:

Be Brave: We are change makers. We value risk-taking and making mistakes knowing all we learn now makes us better next time. Our abundance mindset encourages us to follow our hearts and dream big.

Pursue Excellence: We value professionalism. We strive to deliver quality products and services. We are intentional about providing an experience that inspires all toward their highest aspirations.

Mobilize the Heroes: We do Yoda. We value being the sage on the side empowering the heroes and helping the helpers.

Underlying these is our heart-centered core belief in the goodness of humanity.

We spend much time and effort focused on nurturing our team. That became more difficult during the COVID-19 stay-at-home orders, when we lost in-person interaction for nearly four months. One way we tried to help employees was a $500 gift for each team member to use for their own health and wellness. We also established an employee care fund for each person to direct a $500 gift to nonprofits of their choosing. Additionally, we set up a weekly therapist-guided meditation session, extra opportunities to stay connected and initiated a “Dinner’s on Us” program giving staff and their families a free dinner and a night off from meal prep during April and May.

Our remarkable team has responded during an incredibly challenging season with resilience, compassion, authenticity, caring, resourcefulness, commitment and love.

Our Funds
At North Valley Community Foundation, we get to see a lot of truly remarkable things happen in our immediate area, throughout the country and across the world. People who have an idea, a spark, a place that they want to help or serve … they find their way here, conversations are had and often, quicker than you may imagine, that idea has turned into a viable money-raising, conscience-raising, soul-serving, heart-driven reality.

A young man who wants to make sure any kids in his neighborhood have bikes if they want one? He started a fund here. Clean water projects in developing countries? We have a fund for that, as well. Employers wanting to help employees get over an unexpected financial hurdle? Got it. Scholarship funds, charitable project funds, agency marketing funds, donor-advised funds … yes, yes, yes, yes and more!

Aside from the work that our disaster relief and recovery funds do, NVCF hosts close to 500 different funds. This fiscal year, the work these funds have done has supported more than $2 million in outgoing grants. Social entrepreneurs, strategic philanthropists, individuals, families, service clubs … all of these people, and more, have found a home under NVCF’s umbrella. We are honored to provide support, helping these helpers focus on their whole-hearted work, in whatever way we can.

If gardening is an example of cyclical growing, the Veterans Garden Project is an example of cyclical healing.

Established in 2011 by Michelle Angela and Michael Cannon, and under the North Valley Community Foundation since 2013, this program embodies the phrase, “It is great to part of something bigger than yourself.”

The Veterans Garden Project of Chico’s goal is, “To provide a multi-faceted program for U.S. veterans, treating symptoms of PTSD with hands-on experience of greenhouse management, organic gardening, growing and distributing plant starts to the veteran community, and serving as a knowledge resource for veterans and their families in growing their own food.”

Michelle, a mental health nurse at the Chico VA Outpatient Center, was very familiar with common issues local veterans face daily. Mental and physical health are related in many ways, and she knew that for some, the camaraderie and connection many found during their service was now missing from their lives.

She and her friend, Michael, believed veterans could benefit by engaging in gardening as therapy. Plants were started in a donated greenhouse, and a garden plot in a community garden came next.

Veterans were encouraged to come out and join in with the planting, the tending, the harvesting — and they did. This new mission changed lives, reduced chemical dependence, and honed life skills in agriculture and environmental science.

The Veterans Garden Project has touched several thousand local veterans’ lives and now has two garden plots, two greenhouses, and has given away roughly 80,000 pounds of produce. Community donations, and proceeds from the frequent sales of plant starters to the public, are all raked directly back into the soil to provide free produce and free starters to veterans.

Putting our hands in the dirt has the power to heal our hearts and our minds.
Case Study:

WALK WOOF WAG

Walk Woof Wag may have had its beginning as a required service project for Bryce Velasco, but it has since grown legs (and paws!) and now exists as an annual fundraiser celebrating our beloved canine companions.

Part of NVCF since 2014, what was once Bryce’s eighth-grade leadership class project is now run by the Canine Connection and Friends of Chico Animal Shelter.

Walk Woof Wag has granted over $50,000 to the Chico Animal Shelter's medical fund. While the Chico Animal Shelter is a city-operated program and the employees' salaries and animals' food are part of the budget, all the medical funding for animals, who are sometimes at the neediest times of their lives, comes from donations.

Each fall for the past six years, a day is designated as a festival celebrating ALL THINGS. DOG. Part walk, part carnival, Walk Woof Wag’s event is filled with pet photography, face painting, doggie tattoos and the ever-popular costume contest. The artwork featuring the year’s poster dog has become highly coveted and collectible.

Sarah Richardson, owner of the Canine Connection, remembers when Bryce first approached her for advice on benefitting the Chico Animal Shelter medical fund.

“Walk Woof Wag is really the story of good partnership, in many ways,” she said. “What began as a love of his adopted dog, Jasmine, and an appreciation for community, grew into a mentorship between us.”

NVCF is proud to be a participant in this partnership as well.

Case Study:

THE CELEBRATION FOUNDATION

Charlene Mikeska’s life motto is: “Life is short. Do it now.”

As a breast cancer survivor, she has experienced firsthand the power of hope, the power of resilience and the power of a good celebration. She opened the Celebration Foundation fund at NVCF in 2011 to provide operational support and to continue to produce the event celebrating life beyond breast cancer.

This wildly popular, life-affirming, joyful and fun evening is filled with delicious food, peppy music, lovely auction items and general festivity. It culminates with a fashion show featuring local models who are all at some point in their breast cancer journey. Some may be years past their diagnosis, some may be newly facing theirs and some may be currently in treatment, but all bask in the company of one another, in that certain club that links their fierce strength and courage.

Since its inclusion at NVCF, the Celebration Foundation fund has gifted more than $180,000 to the Celebration Compassion Fund at Enloe Medical Center as well as other local cancer centers. These funds are used to help cancer patients and their families meet needs not covered by health insurance, including such things as bus passes or gas for transportation to treatments, hotel rooms when overnight stays are necessary and purchase of supplies for wound care.

Stories abound from event participants of the experiences they have of gratitude, of recognition, of freedom, and of the deep satisfaction of being a part of giving back to our community. And, as so often happens when we begin our intention of helping others, we ultimately end up realizing how much we have helped ourselves, in the process. Something worthy of celebrating, for sure!

NVCF’s Camp Fire Recovery
In November 2018, Butte County endured the most devastating wildfire in California history. The Camp Fire profoundly changed the region. Many lost loved ones. Homes burned, and shelters were filled. The fire continued for 17 days, and 153,336 acres burned.

In the midst of the chaos and loss were glimpses of light and hope. The world took notice and banded together, rallying for Butte County from afar. People helped.

The North Valley Community Foundation, a small operation at the time, became the philanthropic hub for Camp Fire relief and recovery in a matter of hours.

At first this looked like the staff (all of six people) making phone call after phone call to make sure shelters and food pantries had the resources they needed. This quickly grew into an expanded role of opening funds, convening community leaders and building partnerships to address the challenges that we could not imagine were lying ahead.

It became clear that this would be a long journey. The Butte Strong Fund developed in partnership with Sierra Nevada Brewing Co. and Aaron Rodgers, adding dozens of generous sponsors to support the long-term recovery effort.

In all, more than 600 grants totaling more than $35 million have been awarded to nearly 500 organizations and agencies on the front line of recovery. We exist to fuel the work of these warriors of compassion to ensure individuals and families get the help they need.

It has been one year and nine months since the Camp Fire. We continue on the long road of recovery together, step by step. The North Valley Community Foundation team is honored to participate in this work with the community we love.

NVCF’S CAMP FIRE RECOVERY
A nyone visiting Concow can see that it is not simply unincorporated county territory; Concow is a true community of fiercely independent people. Many artists, farmers and activists call Concow home.

Fire has repeatedly impacted Concow’s residents, but nothing like the Camp Fire in 2018. Concow has yet again proven resilient in the face of devastation, and NVCF wanted to contribute to their recovery in ways that would be meaningful to this unique community.

Among its various partners, NVCF joined with From the Ground Up Farms, Inc. to get involved. From the Ground Up Farms began as a nonprofit dedicated to creating a path for people to learn how to grow their own food. The people at From the Ground Up Farms are deeply connected to their community. Like NVCF, this nonprofit’s role expanded to facilitate the complex web of rebuilding their community.

NVCF supported this connection with four main grants in the last year totaling $292,872.

A grant of $47,472 helped with the reconstruction of the Concow Campground, where many of the community events are held. This is the only gathering space in Concow that provides enough space for families, and it is imperative for the community to regain this space. A grant of $23,000 was approved to assist in rebuilding the Creekside Native Village, which was destroyed in the fire. This very special place for the community is tied to Concow’s roots as the home of the Konkow Maidu Native American tribe. A $122,400 grant supported the creation of a portable sawmill and tool lending library to enable residents access to the basic equipment needed to begin the process of rebuilding.

NVCF also supported essential needs in Concow by granting $100,000 since the fire to Campaign Propane, which provides propane to community members.

OROVILLE HOPE CENTER

The Oroville Hope Center is the main hub of commodity donations for disaster relief in Butte County. They maintain a warehouse filled with donated items to be distributed to those in need.

Since the Camp Fire, the Oroville Hope Center has grown exponentially to meet the needs of the community. They provide food, furnishings, clothing, appliances and much more to those who need assistance.

The Hope Center has continued to meet these needs for the last year and a half. Something that makes the Oroville Hope Center special is their reach. They provide services throughout the burn scar. They established the Paradise Hope Center in order to have a central presence in the epicenter of the affected area. The Oroville Hope Center goes where there is greatest need. They are a prime example of an organization that shows up for their community whenever necessary.

Through the Oroville Hope Center’s distribution center, delivery services, food pantry and other services, grant funding provides support in all areas of the burn scar. Partnering with the Hope Center and their disaster relief services allows NVCF to leverage funding in a way that supports fire survivors across the region.

In addition to the $511,985 granted to the Oroville Hope Center to aid their operations as they continue to provide invaluable assistance to fire-affected communities, NVCF leveraged its relationships with other funders to bring in an additional $220,000 for this critical recovery resource.

STUDENT COUNSELING

While navigating the uncertain and complicated road ahead in the wake of the Camp Fire, the 4,500 children displaced by the devastation became one of our biggest concerns.

How could kids focus on learning long division after their home burned down? Where could they access resources to ensure their wellbeing after enduring this disaster? How would teachers be able to handle an entire classroom of traumatized children while also dealing with their own recent trauma?

School was canceled for all 31,000 students in Butte County after the fire. When classes resumed, students and teachers alike were trying to regain a sense of normalcy and routine while holding their own trauma and loss. It was clear that they needed support.

The Butte County Department of Education developed a plan that addressed these needs for the 2019-2020 school year and presented it to the Butte Strong Fund Committee. The proposal included additional counselors, primary intervention program staff, support for parents, professional development for teachers around mental health first aid, and the administrative support necessary to successfully roll out the changes. With enough coordination and funding, BCOE could expand their capacity to provide these services for the students, staff and families, transforming trauma into resilience and growth.

The Butte Strong Fund was developed to address the long-term recovery needs of the region after the Camp Fire. An investment in the children of Butte County is the clearest contribution to that long-term vision. The approval of this $1,861,260 grant directly affects the future generation. These services provide resources to families, connect kids with counselors and help our teachers adapt to a changed community.
NVCF’s COVID-19 Response
We knew the coronavirus shelter-in-place order would hit the North Valley hard. The safety net here already needed mending even before the Camp Fire, and that disaster made it worse. Throwing another crisis at our area was going to be a challenge.

Drawing from our experience with other disasters, we opened a fund to help address some of those concerns. We seeded the Coronavirus (COVID-19) Rapid Response Fund for Nonprofits and Local Agencies with $250,000 from our operating fund, then started accepting donations.

As always, good-hearted members of the community stepped up to donate. There was even a six-figure donation from the East Coast.

By the end of June, we had distributed nearly $400,000 from the Rapid Response Fund. In addition, our Butte Strong Fund augmented response in the Camp Fire area and issued $180,000 in grants to help Camp Fire survivors. Chico native and NFL star Aaron Rodgers asked us to distribute $50,000 to help children. Citizens in the community opened four charitable funds and granted out more than $160,000.

In all, more than $1 million was distributed for coronavirus relief by June 30, a span of three and a half months. And we’re still going.

Most of the grants were in the $5,000 to $10,000 range to nonprofits working with at-risk populations, often to provide food or personal protective equipment. But there were larger grants as well, including the largest one ($250,000) for lab testing equipment for the Butte County Public Health Department.

Two of our more ambitious projects involved working to get 20,000 face shields for all health care workers in our four-county area, and funding an effort to purchase 95,500 face masks that North Valley businesses could hand out to customers to help enforce the request to wear a mask in stores.

Case Study:

TESTING EQUIPMENT

Early in the coronavirus crisis, NVCF reached out to the Butte County Public Health Department to ask how we could help. The county said its biggest need was quick and reliable testing.

The county had no positive cases in part because very little testing was being done. The Public Health Department sought a polymerase chain reaction machine, more commonly known as a PCR machine. So the NVCF board approved a $250,000 grant from its operating fund (not Camp Fire or other donated funds) for the equipment and other county emergency response needs.

The machine can test up to 80 samples a day and return results within hours. Before, it would take several days because the specimens would have to be sent to Sacramento or the Bay Area.

Danette York, the county’s Public Health director, said it’s rare for a county to have a PCR machine, which is vital for an outbreak at locations like hospitals, nursing homes or the jail.

“If we have patients that we need to know results for quickly, such as individuals in congregate living facilities like the jail or skilled nursing facilities, this equipment is the only way to get results really fast,” said York. “It prevents us from having to ship specimens out of the county and having to wait days for results. It has been instrumental in our response efforts on multiple occasions when we had exposure to critical workforce such as law enforcement and health care providers.”

With the COVID-19 crisis extending, the testing equipment is more vital all the time.

“I am extremely grateful to the NVCF for their generosity and support in providing this lab equipment to our community,” said York. “It has enhanced our ability to respond effectively to COVID-19 in Butte County and will continue to provide us the capability of running tests locally and getting results quickly. Butte County is lucky to have such wonderful partners!”
When the shelter-in-place orders took hold in mid-March and schools closed, the immediate thought of the Boys & Girls Clubs of the North Valley was how to help children.

A sudden worldwide demand for personal protective equipment for health care workers led to a scarcity. A handful of local manufacturers and hobbyists stepped up to help. With a grant from NVCF for material, they used 3D printers to produce face shields for Enloe Medical Center and others.

It quickly became evident that many more shields would be needed. NVCF asked the Public Health departments in Butte, Glenn, Tehama and Colusa counties to help arrive at a number. The goal was to give one reusable shield to all health care workers, from doctors to dental technicians.

The number of shields needed: 20,000.

School districts continued to provide breakfast and lunch. The Boys & Girls Clubs wanted to make sure all children would have dinner, too.

They started a curbside dinner pickup service. A family could drive up and get a nutritious dinner to go for any child in the vehicle.

A $20,000 grant from the Aaron Rodgers NorCal Recovery Fund at NVCF helped the effort get started and then expand to include Chico, Hamilton City, Oroville and the Paradise ridge. An additional $15,500 from our Rapid Response Fund served as the local match to leverage other grants totaling $67,200 and allow the service to continue into June, when the stay-at-home order was lifted.

The Boys & Girls Clubs served more than 10,000 dinners during that time.

“Thanks to North Valley Community Foundation’s immediate response to support us, our staff at the Boys & Girls Clubs could quickly transform from after-school heroes to food service heroes,” said CEO Rashell Brobst. “NVCF helped us give emergency hot meal distribution to hundreds of kids a day throughout Butte and Glenn counties as COVID-19 shut down our clubs, schools and other social service supports available to them.

“With the support of NVCF we were able to quickly mobilize our staff to create new menus, find food sources and develop new safety systems for distribution under all the constantly changing rules and regulations. We are so grateful that during a time of so much uncertainty that NVCF asked how they could help us help kids and gave us the funds to ensure that for 10 weeks we could provide more than 10,000 meals.”

Chico State University had the answer. The university, which was shut down, allowed the engineering department to open a lab and use an injection molding machine to produce the plastic frame, which looks like a visor. Instead of making 100 to 200 per week, they were able to produce 800 per day. Idea Fab Labs, a local manufacturing company, cut out and punched the clear plastic shields that attach to the frame. The shields and the frames can be cleaned and reused.

NVCF and the Feather River Health Foundation paid for the material and labor for both Chico State and Idea Fab Labs so the shields could be donated. They were distributed through the county public health departments.

“It was incredible to watch it come together,” said David Little, executive vice president of NVCF and the coordinator of the project. “Everybody recognized a need for personal protective equipment for all health care workers, then everyone worked to figure out how to make it happen. The teamwork and community spirit was amazing. There were no roadblocks. With every question that came up, somebody figured out a way to say ‘yes.’”

NVCF’s Aaron Rodgers NorCal Recovery Fund
THE Aaron Rodgers NorCal Recovery Fund was established in the immediate aftermath of the Camp Fire to support programs that offer youths stability in the face of crisis, support the local youth sports infrastructure and support the process of bringing permanent and transitional housing back to the burned area.

The fund was established with a generous contribution of $1 million from the Aaron Rodgers Foundation, which was matched by State Farm and Walmart. The fund has been further bolstered by thousands of additional donations, both large and small. The fund has granted more than $645,000 since it began, supporting more than 40 organizations and funding dozens of programs to help promote a sense of normalcy for children who lost so much in the Camp Fire as well as supporting several collaborative housing initiatives.

This past year, the fund has made $275,000 in grants. These grants went to support the renovation and expansion of parks and play areas in Gridley and Concow, a physical activity program catered to those affected by the Camp Fire to help with physical and mental impacts of the disaster, a separate program coordinating multiple organizations in Butte County to develop a series of programs to help youths deal with trauma by having them interact with nature in new ways, and a large collaborative program to provide and construct sheds in the burn scar area to help those who lost their homes protect their property.

When the coronavirus crisis began, the fund sought recommendations to make grants at supporting children and families. Grants were made to support the coronavirus response of the Boys & Girls Clubs of the North Valley, Yellow Door, Valley Oak Children’s Services, the Family Place and the 6th Street Center operated by Youth For Change, Lilliput, and the YMCA of Oroville.

The Healing Trauma Through Nature Group was formed to support a comprehensive program to develop and deliver expanded outdoor experiences to help heal the traumas experienced by residents in communities impacted by the Camp Fire.

The group is made up of more than a dozen organizations, convened under the leadership of the Paradise Recreation and Parks District and Outdoor Education for All, which has a network of nearly 40 organizations including conservation groups, government agencies and nature reserves.

The program is still in its infancy, but thanks in part to a $50,000 grant from the Aaron Rodgers NorCal Recovery Fund, plans are underway to host a variety of events to utilize nature to help to heal the community. A Heal the Healers Retreat at Camp Lassen is being planned for fall 2020 to provide trauma-informed instruction techniques for teachers, administrators and other youth care providers. There is also work being done toward a partnership with the Butte County Tobacco Use Prevention Education coordinator to formulate a plan to involve the program in addressing the needs of students who are caught smoking, vaping or utilizing other banned substances.

The group is also planning for Camp Courage in summer 2020 to be offered to local youths, and an “Art in the Park” event to provide guidance on nature journaling, meditation and mindfulness guided hikes, and hands-on art opportunities focused on nature.

“Rebuilding the Ridge involves much more than construction and improving infrastructure. We must first rebuild and fortify our people — starting with our youth,” said Scott Amick, recreation supervisor, Paradise Recreation and Park District. “Our work plants the seeds for personal recovery and resilience and their resilience will ensure the fruits of economic, cultural and community excellence as the years pass.”
The Aaron Rodgers NorCal Recovery Fund was established in part to support programs that offer stability and safety to children impacted by the Camp Fire, as well as to support programs related to temporary and transitional housing in the wake of the disaster.

After the Camp Fire, Gridley became home to hundreds of displaced households and the site of the largest FEMA modular home community in the area. These households included more than 100 children who survived the Camp Fire and now called Gridley home. At that time, the city of Gridley had two parks, each more than a decade old and inadequate to meet the needs of the new population. The Gridley Recreation Division reached out to the North Valley Community Foundation to seek funding to expand Manuel Vierra Park, which was located just more than a mile from the modular home community.

Thanks in large part to a $50,000 grant from the Aaron Rodgers NorCal Recovery Fund, a ribbon cutting ceremony was held on Feb. 21, 2020, to announce the newly expanded Manuel Vierra Park to the community. The park is now ADA compliant and boasts new swings, a rope climbing dome, a rope merry-go-round and a zip line.

“Gridley has grown so much so fast in the last few years. The need for additional activities and play structures was long overdue,” said Katrina Leishman, recreation coordinator for the Gridley Recreation Division. “The joy I get to witness as I see dozens of families and children flock to our new playground is more than I can put into words. It has brought our community even closer as we see families and friends enjoy being outdoors and playing with their children. Thank you so much for making this possible!”

The program secured funding to operate from August 2019 through July 2020 thanks in part to a $50,000 grant from the Aaron Rodgers NorCal Recovery Fund. The program has been providing around 20 classes a week, regularly serving approximately 245 community members per week. Many are older adults who were affected by the Camp Fire.

Classes were canceled after the coronavirus shelter-in-place orders took effect in March, but instructors posted videos of workouts every week that could be completed using household items. Limited, socially distanced classes resumed in mid-June.

The Paradise Ridge Elementary School program had been hosting a weekly physical education program on site for approximately 350 students per week. After the school closed because of coronavirus, the instructor of the program sent weekly videos to the students to continue their engagement.

“We are eternally grateful that the Aaron Rodgers grant program at NVCF sees the value in funding this program,” said Catherine Himberg, a professor in the Department of Kinesiology at Chico State University. “We know the effects that physical activity has on stress and depression, and it is wonderful to know that funders in this community are open enough to consider the full range of ways to help this community heal. To the people we are now able to help, it matters and it makes a big difference.”
Donors
Dear Donors,

Healing and recovery start with a tiny spark, a glimmer of hope and belief that we all can make a difference. For the survivors who lost homes, businesses and loved ones in the Camp Fire, for the members of our communities that didn’t know where their next meal would come from during the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, and so many more facing overwhelming odds, you were that tiny spark of light and hope that was needed to march on. Your philanthropy is personal and powerful. Thank you for giving without hesitation and for being the ones who brought us torches in the dark.

Forever Grateful,

North Valley Community Foundation
Blue Puffer Brewing Company

More than 1,400 breweries nationwide signed up to team with Sierra Nevada to make Resilience Butte County Proud IPA. All proceeds from beer sales went to fire relief efforts.

One 10-year-old boy in Marin County, Owen Shore, decided to do the same. “There’s all these pictures of these giant lots of ash, and I wanted to help build new houses,” he said.

Owen made 22 four-packs and sold them to family members and adult friends. He called his endeavor the Blue Puffer Brewing Company, named after his favorite jacket. The 88 bottles of Resilience IPA that Owen made sold out in less than a day, thanks to his parents spreading the word about their son’s initiative through social media.

He then sent a check to NVCF with 100 percent of the proceeds — $462 in all.

“I hope,” he wrote in the letter mailed with his check, “my money helps the fire victims.”

Owen did not stop there. He went on to brew two additional batches of Blue Puffer Brew to continue ongoing philanthropy in support of Camp Fire victims. His second batch was named after the town, Paradise Hefeweizen.

At NVCF we have built our core values around social entrepreneurship. That’s the belief that business should be a source of economic wealth, but it also should be a source of social change.

Our social entrepreneurs are extraordinary people who come up with brilliant ideas that dramatically change people’s lives. Social entrepreneurship signals the imperative drive for social change and has the power to bring about transformational benefits to society.

Featured here are some of the creative people we’ve met along our journey who have used the paint brush of philanthropy to color our world with new and exciting ways to serve our communities.

Many children are struggling to understand their new normal in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic. This inspired Emily Hajec to use this turn of events to check off a bucket-list goal on her lifelong to-do list: She wrote a children’s book and enlisted the help of her friend, Alycia Jones, to illustrate it.

Inspired by children everywhere who are being so brave during the COVID-19 stay-at-home orders, Hajec and Jones self-published “The Germ Who Got Tired of Waiting.” It tells the story of one mean little bad guy (who nobody could see), and the power of perspective and family.

The Germ Who Got Tired of Waiting

In December, representatives of Thrive Causemetics traveled to Butte County and presented a check for $50,000 to our Camp Fire Relief Fund.

In November 2018 at the onset of the devastating Woolsey Fire in Southern California and the Camp Fire in Northern California, the Thrive leadership team was moved to action and immediately sought ways to make a meaningful and supportive contribution to the relief efforts.

Thrive committed to donating 100% of their profits to wildfire relief efforts and shared the challenge with their online community through the Thrive for CA campaign. With incredible support from their Thrive Tribe (customers and followers), they were able to raise $250,000 for wildfire relief.

The local author and illustrator committed to donate 100% of the profits from their first 250 copies sold to NVCF’s Coronavirus Rapid Response Fund. See more about the book at

Our greatest resource is friends. Over the last year, NVCF continues to build its work through the unitive power of working together with our critical partnerships of community leaders and compassionate and generous funders.

We engage community leadership, weave strategies, address challenges, and support organizations and agencies to push through uncomfortable (and sometimes unrelenting) obstacles to ensure long-term recovery is a success. This process has not gone without its learning moments, which have uniquely helped us all gain knowledge and move in a way that allows the community to grow.

The complexity of recovery compels us to navigate the road ahead together on a scale we’ve rarely witnessed. By leveraging our relationships and creating partnerships around priorities and projects, NVCF created the Butte Strong Fund in partnership with Sierra Nevada Brewing Co. and Aaron Rodgers. This hard work could not be completed without them showing up for their community. The greater good has shined bright from these folks and we are grateful for them.

This strategy of leveraging relationships helped us build a coalition of funding partners to launch the Manufactured Home Replacement Project. The relationships developed during the process of standing up the Manufactured Home Project amplified how big the hearts of those willing to do the work truly are.

These partnerships have been the biggest advantage to our commitment to serve our community. Partnerships like that not only leverage the work but also shows strength in numbers. NVCF has also acknowledged and paid close attention to this: These organizations are made up of people whose work truly make this community thrive in the healing process. Recovery would not be in the stage that it’s in without them. People helping people. People helping our most vulnerable people.

The goal remains to keep connecting and engaging with those who are the helpers and the healers. That is our greatest contribution, to maintain these relationships and grow new ones with recovery in mind. Thank you and congratulations to our region for holding one another up.
We know that to be an effective funder, we can have an outsized impact by leveraging our funding to trigger resources that are far larger than our own. That could mean influencing other funders (institutional or individual), catalyzing government support, mobilizing public will and opinion, or stimulating markets to provide services.

Just as corporations develop strong networks of trusted suppliers for needed goods and services, major private foundations require strong networks of local intelligence, additional funding and leadership in order to accomplish our organizational and community-wide goals.

Often a little bit of money can provide access to a lot more money. One example was paying for a road survey in Paradise just after the Camp Fire so the town could then access millions of dollars in government funding to repair roads after the rebuilding effort is finished. Another example: Government funding frequently comes with a required match of local dollars. If a five-figure local grant leads to seven-figure funding, we feel fortunate to help.
The Camp Fire destroyed Tina Balasek’s home and all her belongings except the vehicle that barely helped her escape the flames.

Balasek, who was just starting to recover from Lyme disease that was undiagnosed for many years, bounced around from place to place, always feeling like an outsider wherever she landed. She knew she wanted to be in Paradise. She used the insurance money from her mobile home that burned to buy a lot off Pentz Road. A large house that was on the property had burned and the owner had no interest in returning. She also bought a used RV to put there.

In December, more than a year after the fire, she received unfathomable news. A case manager told her she would be getting a home of her own – for free – as part of the Camp Fire Manufactured Home Replacement Project. The effort to provide at least 40 homes for Camp Fire survivors was funded by grants and donations.

“I have a place to call home. There’s nothing like it,” she said. “And I feel guilty too. I know so many people need a home.”

The Camp Fire Manufactured Home Replacement project is the work of several organizations. Samaritan’s Purse donated the homes. Other major partners are NVCF, Camp Fire Collaborative, Wells Fargo, Center for Disaster Philanthropy and American Red Cross.

Balasek looks forward to the new beginning.

“There are days I just want to sit here and cry,” she said. “That would be the easy thing to do. But sometimes you have to just show up. Do what you need to do. Go through the day. Help people if you can.

“If we help each other and do it together, we’ll get it done,” she said. “It will take longer than anybody wants, but we’ll get it done.”
Like so many Americans and people all over the world, we grieved for George Floyd, who senselessly lost his life at the hands of a Minneapolis police officer on May 25, 2020. As a foundation, this was a pivotal moment in our mission to create a better, more loving world. We realized that in order to fuel healing and compassion for a better world we must first look at the darkest parts of ourselves and our society, exposing the reality of systematic racism.

With this knowledge, our staff did what it does best: put love into action.

We immediately took to social media and used our platform to elevate the Black community. We created a social media post of Black-owned and operated local businesses for the community to support. We opened dialogues with these organizations and made a commitment to walk alongside them, to listen and to support.

A community group in Chico came together to create an offering of love and support. The Bethel AME Church Restoration Project Fund held at NVCF intends to raise $100,000 to restore the steeple and bell tower of the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Chico. This is the oldest church in Chico, dating to 1863.

Conversations around the role of philanthropy in the fight for racial justice soon led to the creation of the North State Equity Fund. This fund is a partnership between NVCF, Shasta Regional Community Foundation and United Way of Northern California. The fund has been started with $100,000 in seed money, which will be granted to community organizations that are doing the constructive and unifying work of justice and healing.

We will continue together down this path of racial reconciliation as a community, hand in hand.
REMEMBERING DOUG AND DIANE

We lost two vital members of our family this year and continue to mourn their absence. Doug Hignell and Diane Ruby were two special members of the community who also played a critical role in shaping NVCF.

Doug Hignell was a kind and generous man who loved people. He went out of his way to help others and did so without a desire for notoriety. Countless people had their lives changed by Doug’s generosity without ever knowing that Doug was the person behind it. Doug and his father, Fred, literally built much of Chico through their company, Hignell & Hignell, Inc. He died on Sept. 11, 2019, after a brief battle with cancer. He was 76. His charitable deeds continue to this day. Memorial contributions can be made to the Doug Hignell Memorial Fund at https://www.nvcf.org/funds/doug-hignell-memorial-fund.

Diane Ruby served on our board of directors for nearly 10 years, handpicked by our CEO and president because she is precisely the type of loving individual who can identify with and guide the heart-centered work we do at the foundation. Diane was the co-owner of Sheraton Real Estate Management. Diane died on May 24, 2020. She was 63. Memorial contributions can be made to the Hope Foundation at https://www.nvcf.org/funds/Community-Impact-Fund---The-Hope-Foundation.

We miss them both dearly.
Emerging from the coronavirus shelter-in-place orders at the end of June, our team was thrilled to move in to our new home in southeast Chico. Our new office is, fittingly, in the Foundation Building at Meriam Park, an emerging new development.

At Meriam Park, we embrace shared values with the community-minded development team. Meriam Park’s mission: “Our vision is to create an authentic and lasting sense of place built upon a foundation of sustainability, diverse uses, and social vibrancy. Our development philosophy embraces designs that are compact in design, pedestrian and transit oriented and energy efficient to reduce environmental impacts.”

Our new address is The Foundation Building, 1811 Concord Ave., Suite 220, Chico, CA 95928. Our telephone number remains (530) 891-1150.
There have been some incredible people who have jumped in to help (after the Camp Fire) and it starts, in my opinion, with the North Valley Community Foundation — raising millions of dollars, out there assessing the needs of our communities in real time and finding the best places to help.

AARON RODGERS, GREEN BAY PACKERS QUARTERBACK

Without NVCF, Butte County and the many agencies and organizations providing Camp Fire recovery support to our residents and survivors would not have been able to provide the level of support needed. Government funding was not sufficient to meet the needs, and the foundation proved to be our ‘pennies from heaven’ to fill the many gaps in recovery. NVCF continues to support Camp Fire recovery efforts, in addition to rising to the occasion and providing similar support in response to the COVID-19 pandemic. The foundation, its dedicated staff and its generous donors illustrate philanthropy, compassion and altruism on a daily basis!

SHARI MCCrackEN, BUTTE COUNTY CHIEF ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICER

Why do I work with NVCF? Good question. Initially it was because of Alexa. She had a passion for helping people. She has established a quality team that shares her passion. When you see any business that is running smoothly, it always is because of the leadership at the top. We use NVCF for our donor-advised funds because we can count on their staff to help us quietly support the many nonprofits in Chico that deserve our support.

GREG WEBB

The North Valley Community Foundation continues to successfully navigate its critical mission of meeting the growing needs of our neighbors and friends. Through compassionate leadership coupled with generous personal and corporate support, NVCF continues to provide the critical bridge between donors and the charities that serve our community. Get to know them.

BRIAN Sweeney, CHICO RESIDENT

Chico State is incredibly grateful to work alongside the North Valley Community Foundation to improve the quality of life for residents of the north state. Among our many joint projects are the Resiliency Collaborative, which focuses on gathering expertise, identifying challenges, producing solutions and showcasing the successes in our resiliency work, and the Forest Therapy pilot project, which will serve 450 Camp Fire survivors at Chico State’s ecological preserves. More recently, the foundation supported Chico State and Idea Fab Labs to 3D print thousands of face shields for area medical providers when personal protective equipment was difficult to procure. When there is an identified need, NVCF steps up and Chico State is a committed partner. We are so blessed to have this powerful force for good in our community.

GAYLE HUTCHINSON, CHICO STATE UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT
NVCF is amazing. They have an extremely difficult job as they work endless hours determining how these donations can do the most good. We are extremely grateful for all of their help with Concow rebuilding efforts. Thank you!

JENNY LOWREY, FROM THE GROUND UP FARMS

We can’t think of a more highly regarded, dedicated and effective community-minded, philanthropic organization than the North Valley Community Foundation to partner with on pandemic relief in our communities and region.

I’m contributing a million dollars to North Valley Community Foundation.

MARC BENIOFF, SALESFORCE CEO, IN APPEARANCE ON “MAD MONEY”

We are doing what we believe we are supposed to do to help our fellow brothers and sisters in the community who desperately need not necessarily a hand out, but a hand up. Thank you also for how you all at North Valley Community Foundation have come alongside us to provide the financial resources to do what we do. We may be the hands and feet but you have truly been the heart and soul because you see what we see and help us to take action in ways that we wouldn’t otherwise have been able to if it weren’t for your financial support. With that I’d like to take an opportunity to thank North Valley Community Foundation!

KEVIN THOMPSON, SOUTHSIDE OROVILLE COMMUNITY IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

In the aftermath of the devastation caused by the Camp Fire, Wells Fargo wanted to help the community recover. It was important for us to work with a strong organization and sustainable model that would continue to address the collective and highest community needs. The leadership and staff at North Valley Community Foundation clearly had deep connections with community leaders, had the pulse on community needs, and the heart and expertise to bring the community together to work to achieve common goals. We were honored to philanthropically invest $3.25 million in the Butte Strong Fund, held at North Valley Community Foundation, and continue to have confidence in their efforts to help those most impacted by this tragedy.

KÄREN WOODRUFF, WELLS FARGO BANK

My wife, Katie, and I are big supporters of all the great work that Alexa and the team at North Valley Community Foundation provide to our community and the region. They have been a trusted partner for us to help manage many of our local charitable objectives. Their leadership and value to the region was never so evident as was displayed during the Camp Fire tragedy. Within hours they mobilized and were providing resources to those most in need, and continue to support the long and difficult rebuilding process. Their ongoing community support has continued to play a significant role in dealing with the current COVID-19 pandemic providing much-needed medical supplies and community outreach.
